

God's Preservation of His Children

David Wilkerson (1931-2011) April 13, 2021

I believe that Psalm 46 is a picture of the New Testament "promised land." Indeed, Psalm 46 represents the divine rest referred to in Hebrews: "There remains therefore a rest for the people of God" (Hebrews 4:9). This Psalm describes this rest to God's people. It speaks of his ever-present strength, his help in time of trouble, his peace in the midst of chaos. God's presence is with us at all times, and his help always arrives on time.

Israel rejected this rest: "Then they despised the pleasant land; they did not believe His word" (Psalm 106:24). Sadly, the church today is much like Israel. In spite of God's great promises to us—his assurance of peace, help and full supply—we don't trust him fully. Instead, we complain, "Where is God in my trial? Is he with me or not? Where is any evidence of his presence? Why does he keep letting these hardships pile up on me?"

Today, I hear the Lord asking his church, "Do you believe I still speak to my people? Do you believe I desire to give you my help and guidance? Do you truly believe I want to speak to you daily, hourly, moment by moment?" Our response has to be like David's. That godly man shook all hell when he made this statement about the Lord: "For He spoke, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." (Psalm 33:9).

Here is God's promise to every generation who would believe his Word that he desires to speak to us: "The counsel of the Lord stands forever, the plans of His heart to all generations" (33:11). The Creator of the universe wants to share his very thoughts with us!

Scripture make it clear: Our God spoke to his people in the past, he's speaking to his people now, and he'll continue to speak to us till the very end of time. More to the point, God wants to speak to you about your problem today. He may do it through his Word, through a godly friend, or through the Spirit's still, small voice, whispering, "This is the way, walk in it."

No matter what means he uses, you will recognize his voice. The sheep know the voice of their Shepherd. And, "He preserves the souls of His saints; He delivers them out of the hand of the wicked" (Psalm 97:10).
